Why Expand to Germany?

Germany is the number one destination for foreign entrepreneurs as well as big corporations, with its promising opportunities and dynamic business atmosphere of the EU market. The government tries to encourage investments in all regions of the country offering many grants mainly for small and medium-sized enterprises. German system of promotion of foreign trade and investment is characterized by a division of responsibilities between the state and the private sector. Various institutions, such as the German chambers of commerce abroad, foreign missions, and Germany Trade and Invest (GTAI), work closely together to deliver the best possible backing for German firms.

Most of the FDI originates from the following countries: The EU, China, USA, UK, Switzerland, Russia

Primary sectors: Vehicles, Machinery, Chemical goods, Electronic products, Electrical equipment, Pharmaceuticals, Transport equipment, Basic metals, Food products, Rubber plastics

Investment Incentives in Germany

Germany offers numerous incentives for foreign investors. There are a variety of programs available, designed to fit the needs of economic activities at different stages of the investment process. Support ranges from cash incentives to labor-related and R&D incentives. These incentive programs are available through public funding instruments and for different funding purposes.
